Donald Trump's presidency was marked by a number of speeches that emphasized his "America First" agenda. These speeches often focused on themes of national pride, economic protectionism, and immigration restriction.

One of Trump's most famous speeches was his inaugural address, delivered on January 20, 2017. In this speech, Trump outlined his vision for an "America First" foreign policy, declaring that "from this day forward, it's going to be only America First."

Trump's America First agenda was also evident in his speeches on trade and immigration. In a speech on trade policy delivered in April 2017, Trump announced that the United States would withdraw from the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) trade agreement. Trump argued that the TPP would harm American workers and businesses, and that the United States could negotiate better deals on its own.

In a speech on immigration delivered in August 2017, Trump called for a crackdown on illegal immigration and a ban on travel from several Muslim-majority countries. Trump argued that these measures were necessary to protect the United States from terrorism.

Trump's America First speeches were often controversial, and they were met with criticism from both Democrats and Republicans. Critics argued that Trump's policies were isolationist and xenophobic, and that they would damage the United States' relationships with its allies.

Despite the controversy, Trump's America First speeches were popular with many of his supporters. These supporters saw Trump as a strong leader who was willing to put the interests of the United States first.
