What is Storyboarding?

Storyboarding is the process of creating a visual representation of a story. It's a way to plan out the action, characters, and dialogue of a film, TV show, or commercial.

Storyboards are typically created using a series of panels, which are individual drawings that represent a scene or moment in the story. The panels are then arranged in a logical order to tell the story visually.

Storyboarding is an essential part of the filmmaking process, as it allows directors to get a clear idea of how the film will look before shooting begins. Storyboards can also be used to pitch projects to potential investors.
