The Forgotten World is a vast, remote region of New Zealand that is home to some of the country's most stunning scenery. The area is characterised by its towering mountains, lush rainforests, and sparkling lakes. The Forgotten World is a popular destination for hikers, campers, and nature lovers, and it offers a unique opportunity to experience the beauty of New Zealand's natural heritage.

The Forgotten World is located in the central North Island of New Zealand, and it is bordered by the Taranaki Ranges to the west, the Kaimanawa Mountains to the east, and the Ruahine Ranges to the south. The area is sparsely populated, with only a few small towns and villages scattered throughout the region. The largest town in the Forgotten World is Taumarunui, which has a population of around 5,000 people.

The Forgotten World is a popular destination for hikers, and there are a number of well-maintained trails that wind through the region. One of the most popular hikes in the Forgotten World is the Whanganui River Great Walk, which follows the Whanganui River for 145 kilometres. The Whanganui River Great Walk is a challenging hike, but it is also one of the most rewarding, as it takes hikers through some of the most beautiful scenery in New Zealand.

The Forgotten World is also a popular destination for campers, and there are a number of campsites located throughout the region. Camping in the Forgotten World is a great way to experience the area's natural beauty, and it is also a relatively affordable way to travel. There are a number of different campsites to choose from, ranging from basic campsites with no facilities to more developed campsites with showers and toilets.

The Forgotten World is a truly unique and special place, and it is a must-visit for anyone who loves hiking, camping, or simply spending time in nature. The area is home to some of the most beautiful scenery in New Zealand, and it is a place where you can truly escape the hustle and bustle of everyday life.
