Getting to the Netherlands

The Netherlands is easily accessible by plane, train, or car. Amsterdam Schiphol Airport (AMS) is the main international airport in the Netherlands. It is located about 15 kilometers southwest of Amsterdam. There are also several other international airports in the Netherlands, including Rotterdam The Hague Airport (RTM), Eindhoven Airport (EIN), and Groningen Airport Eelde (GRQ).

The Netherlands is also well-connected by train to other European countries. There are direct train services from Amsterdam to London, Paris,

Brussels, Berlin, and other major European cities.

If you are driving to the Netherlands, you will need to have a valid driver's license and insurance. The Netherlands has a well-developed network of highways and roads. However, it is important to note that the speed limit in the Netherlands is 130 kilometers per hour on highways and 100 kilometers per hour on other roads.

Where to Stay in the Netherlands

There are a variety of accommodation options available in the Netherlands, from budget-friendly hostels to luxury hotels. Here are a few of the most popular tourist destinations in the Netherlands:

- Amsterdam
- Rotterdam
